

THE COVER: The Alpha Delta Phi House at Cornell is recognized as one of the most distinguished and beautiful fraternity houses in America. It was designed in 1929 by John Russell Pope, who possesses a record of well-known and appreciated works. Two of his better known works are the National Archives Building, and the National Gallery of Art, both in Washington, D.C.

THE CHAPTER HOUSE AND BROTHERS-IN-ARMS: When you walk past the Alpha Delt House you notice the windowless structure shaped like an eight pointed star. This is our Chapter House or as it is more commonly known "the Goat House." It was erected in 1903 in memoriam to Hiram Murray Little, an Alpha Delt, of the class of 1905. The Chapter House is connected to the main house by a tunnel, which is the primary means of entrance. It is frequently used for meetings of the brotherhood and plays an important role in our initiation ceremonies.

The Brothers-in-arms statue is dedicated to the memory of those Alpha Delt who died in World War I. One of these statues is found in every Alpha Delta Phi fraternity throughout the United States and Canada. A noted sculptor, Captain Robert Aitken, was commissioned to do this memorial in 1920. One of his major works is the nine-figured sculpture on the front of the Supreme Court Building in Washington, D.C.

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

James Joyce wrote "When you kick out for yourself . . . remember, whatever you do, to mix with gentlemen. When I was a young fellow I tell you I enjoyed myself. Every one of us could do something. One had a good voice, another was a good actor, another was a good oarsman or a good racket player, another could tell a good story, and so on. We kept the ball rolling anyhow and enjoyed ourselves and saw a bit of life and we were none the worse for it either." Combine this with intellectual purpose, and I think you will find the result an accurate description of the Alpha Delt at Cornell.

For our fraternity was founded on stronger beliefs than social excellence. It looks for depth of character and diversity in its members. Evidence of this lies in the successes of our alumni, represented by such outstanding individuals as Franklin and Theodore Roosevelt, G. Keith Funston, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Stephen Vincent Benet, Henry R. Luce, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Walter C. Teagle, Headmasters of St. John's, Phillips Andover, Phillips Exeter, Lawrenceville, Kent, Presidents of Colgate, Harvard, Yale, Johns Hopkins, Trinity, Vassar, etc., etc.

May I offer you a strong invitation to visit Alpha Delta Phi. Look closely, for you will see sincere depth and purpose in its members. And, if you should join Alpha Delt, may I congratulate you on joining a fraternity with a strong and well reputed tradition at Cornell.

B. Eliot Wigginton
President

SCHOLASTICS

For the past several years Alpha Delta Phi has been one of the top ten fraternities on the hill scholastically.

However, Alpha Delt maintains a liberal outlook on studying. No one will ever force you to study. Every so often someone stands up in house-meeting and admonishes people to work harder. Usually they do. Study conditions are not the most important criteria in judging a fraternity's academics, as most fraternities have quiet hours, etc., and are much alike in this respect. What is most important is the attitude taken by the individual toward ideas and intellectualism.

Alpha Delta Phi has a literary program which brings a speaker to the house twice a month. Such meetings are, of course, voluntary, but at one time or another virtually everyone participates. This is one indication, although an institutional one, of the measure of our intellectual commitment.

Other facets of fraternity life are adequately covered in this booklet, facets which we consider important. Although we welcome the brilliant student and the not-so-brilliant student, the real gleam in our eye is for the curious and interested one.

DIVERSIONS

You might wonder why an air of preoccupation seems to characterize the Alpha Delt, one sees so often here and there on the hill. The explanation is simple: they are preoccupied. But this isn't sufficient to the inquisitive freshman mind: with what shadings of immortality are they so preoccupied?

The answer lies in extra curricular diversions which are as much a part of life at Cornell as Freshman English or Professor Newhall. Alpha Delt has an interest in almost every diversion Cornell offers. Student organizations, athletics, music, and various "extramurals" command the attention that causes the A.D. to seem preoccupied.

Choose an activity at Cornell from the Polmology Club to Student Government and an Alpha Delt is either active in it or running it. These activities are not just something to add to a business or law school application, but rather something that contributes to the university while helping the student develop a deeper knowledge of a field in which he is already interested.

Alpha Delta Phi was founded as a literary fraternity and in keeping with this ideal we are proud of several brothers who recently won prizes in a national fraternity contest. The Sun, Image, Dialogue and just about any other publication that gets a charter from SCARB has an Alpha Delt contributing to it.

Alpha Delt has a long ancestry of golden throats. Several brothers are active members of the Sherwoods, the Glee Club, the Chamber Music Singers, and the Sage Chapel Choir. The brotherhood also supplies executive membership for the Woods.

Among all this writing and singing the jock is not neglected. With brothers on the varsity lacrosse, soccer, 150-football, crew, tennis and golf teams, A.D. at times takes on the slightly moldy air of perspiration.

The novelty of students from other countries, is a strong attraction for the brotherhood. Citizens of nine countries are currently members and the rapport between these students and the rest of the house has been a valuable one.

Perhaps, the social aspects of the house seem neglected, but a visit to 777 Stewart any Saturday (after moratorium please) will quickly dispell this illusion.

From Bryn Mawr to Vassar, Wells to Wellesley, from quail hunting coquetting, someone is or has been involved. You have quite a spread before you at Alpha Delt. Bring over your favorite subject or angle and we'll talk it over. If you've got something we haven't touched upon, all the better; we would like to hear about it.

THE SOCIAL PROGRAM

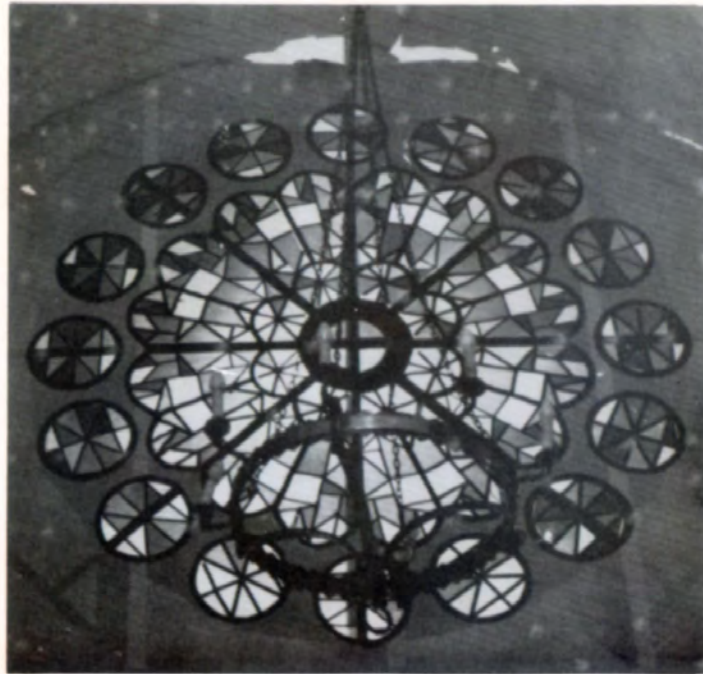

The social program at Alpha Delt is designed to combine the diverse interests of the brotherhood with the many traditions that have been established by the fraternity. Each term the brothers discuss and vote upon a program proposed by the social chairman, and each term the parties are widely varied.

Our social calendar also includes several unique events that have been traditional at Alpha Delt. In addition to the three big house party weekends, our Christmas faculty egg nog party has become a Cornell institution. Another is the Club 777 party, for which the house is turned into a night club.

Other special parties include a frosh tea for the freshmen girls, and our parents' weekend. Despite all this activity, social dues remain amazingly low ($5.50 per month) with added assessments only on the three large weekends.

ATHLETICS

Athletics are an integral part of fraternity life at Alpha Delta Phi. Alpha Delts have always held key positions on many of the University teams in a variety of sports.

Alpha Delta Phi also takes an active interest in intramural athletics, fielding a team in almost every sport offered. Since we consider intramurals to be mainly "for the fun of it," we emphasize team spirit and maximum participation from the whole brotherhood. This emphasis does not preclude winning, however. For example during the past year our football and softball teams won top honors in their leagues. In short, no matter what your interests or aspirations may be in sports—all-American or bench jockey—you will find full support and enjoyment in Alpha Delta Phi.

FROM THE TREASURER

Alpha Delt has long been sound financially. This is partly the result of: an alumni association which has always been active in looking after the financial well-being of the chapter, and the Adelpic Fund which loans money interest-free to needy members.

Your housebill will break down as follows:

As a Brother		As a pledge
Board	$ 67.00	Board	$ 61.00
Chapter Dues	17.50	Chapter Dues	17.50
Social Dues	5.50	Social Dues	5.50
Room	35.00
Total	$125.00	Total	$ 84.00

The housebills are paid 9 times a year. The initiation fee is $100, which includes the fraternity badge. It is also important to note that there are no assessments or fines, which the exception of Fall, I.F.C., and Spring Weekend assessments for those who attend.

A MESSAGE FROM THE RESIDENT COUNSELOR

The Cornell Chapter of Alpha Delta Phi has long had the reputation of excellence and leadership on the hill, recognizing not only the importance of fellowship in the fraternal sense, but also service and participation in the many affairs of the University community. It is interested in considering for membership students of serious academic purpose who also wish to take advantage of the personal growth to be found here.

Perhaps you are wondering how you become integrated into this group. Once you have finished the rushing program and signed your bid, pledging begins.

When you make your first walk to Alpha Delt after signing your bid, don't worry about walking through the door and having a book of material for memorization thrust into your hand. The first things you probably receive are a warm hand shake and damn welcome drink.

This tone of informality and sincerity will be the basis of the pledge program you will undergo. You will not be molded into the image of an Alpha Delt, if such a thing exists, but will rather be helped to become an integral, albeit individual, part of our group.

Dr. Allen Brown
